FIRST YEAR EXPERIENCE HISTORY COURSES

The History Department at Lehigh is pleased to announce three exciting First Year Experience courses in Fall 2018. We accept AP credit for students with a score of five (5).

History 90: Graphic Histories
This course uses non-fiction historical graphic novels as a basis for introducing the college-level study of history. Students will use the graphic accounts to explore basic questions about how historians construct narratives of past events using different kinds of primary source evidence, with a special focus on the challenge of apprehending the lives of those who are left out of the official historical record. The readings cover subjects that range across different regions and periods of world history since 1600, including Native American history, modern English nationalism, the history of sports, the Atlantic Slave Trade, European encroachment in 19th century China, and the history and memory of the Holocaust. Can be counted in place of HIST 001: Time Travel, for those interested in pursuing a major in History.
TR 10:45 – 12:00

History 90: Cultures & Experiences of Africans and Africana People
This interdisciplinary course traces the cultures and achievements of Africans and people of African origins. It emphasizes how their similarities and differences shape their identities. HU
TR 9:20-10:35

History 90: Gender & Sexuality in Twentieth-Century Media: A History
Visual and print media have reflected important changes in gender norms and sexuality in American culture, and they themselves have also been engines of change. This seminar explores the history of gender and sexuality in the 20th century in and through such popular media (including film, television, magazines, and advertising). By using the sources of popular culture, we will seek to understand changing gender ideals, expectations of marriage, sexual identities, and the role of media in American culture and politics.
TR 1:10-2:35
